NOTABLE LAWS

ELECTRONICS COMMUNICATIONS PRIVACY ACT

WHAT IS IT?

Federal statutes protect electronic communications, including e-mail, instant messaging, and the keystrokes of network users (and sometime abusers) both from interception while they are being sent, and from access after they arrive at their destination.

WHO DOES IT PROTECT?

ECPA protects everyone's wire, oral, and electronic communications

PENALTIES FOR VIOLATING ECPA

Individuals who violate ECPA face up to five years in prison and fines up to $250,000.
